Hi,

As a resident of Grafton and an ardent lover of nature and pristine wooded environments, I am concerned about this proposed high density housing project that borders on Grafton Land Trust's Gummere Woods and Marsters Preserve. The eco systems of these woods are fragile and vulnerable to surface water run off (rich in fertilizer, pesticide and insecticide residues) from landscapes in housing communities. This housing project cuts across open space - which is a losing ecological necessity in Grafton. Think of this as a lot of people and their human activity neighboring and disrupting the fragility of nature -its sounds, at the same time its solitude, peace and diversity. Once this densely populated community is established, noise, air and water pollution is going to make its way into the woods. In the interest of the people of Grafton and its future generations, its conserved lands must be protected from such intrusion. That is the principle with which the Grafton Land Trust operates and that must be respected.
